Tago-no-ura is renowned as the fishing port closest to Mount Fuji. It is the very heart of Japan's quintessential landscape, immortalized in works by world-famous Ukiyo-e masters like Katsushika Hokusai's Thirty-six Views of Mount Fuji and Utagawa Hiroshige's The Fifty-three Stations of the Tōkaidō. This port town, spread out beneath Mount Fuji, has been celebrated, painted, and loved in Japanese poetry and art since ancient times.

See the View of Hokusai and Hiroshige with Your Own Eyes...

In Hokusai's Tago Bay near Ejiri on the Tōkaidō, the raw power of Mount Fuji is dynamically juxtaposed with the rough waves of the Pacific and the sight of fishing boats. Meanwhile, Hiroshige's The Fifty-three Stations of the Tōkaidō portrays Tago-no-ura and Miho no Matsubara with delicate brushstrokes, introducing it as a destination deeply longed for by travelers. The exact scenery captured in these historic Ukiyo-e prints now unfolds before your eyes.

●Experience a Moment of Tranquility and Majesty on the Island of the Gods

Miyajima, the Sacred Island Floating in the Seto Inland Sea. A Ponant cruise offers a Miyajima experience unlike any other.

Itsukushima Shrine – The Beauty of Shrine Architecture Floating on the Sea

The shrine's corridors and pavilions stretch over the water, transforming with the ebb and flow of the tides into a dreamlike vision—a palace seemingly floating upon the sea. Seamlessly uniting nature and architecture, this sacred site stands as a symbol of Japan's architectural grace and spiritual depth.

Cultural Encounters and Tranquility at Daisho-in Temple

On the island, visitors can also explore Daisho-in, Miyajima's oldest temple. While Itsukushima Shrine embodies grandeur, Daisho-in offers a serene and contemplative atmosphere rooted in Buddhist tradition.

Join a special temple visit, prayer, or Zen meditation guided by monks, and find a moment of inner calm.

●A World Heritage Village Where Fishing Traditions and Faith Endure

Nestled in a quiet bay, Amakusa is known for its unique historical landscape born from the fusion of Christianity and Japanese spirituality. It offers visitors a truly special experience unique to this place.

A Special Moment in a World Heritage Village

Accompanied by an expert guide, take a leisurely walk through Sakitsu Church and the fishing village.

This guided experience offers a deeper understanding of the Hidden Christians' history and the distinctive culture of faith that took root here.

Where Christianity and Japanese Religion Intertwine

The very townscape, where shrines, temples, and churches coexist side by side, stands as proof that Christianity once endured in secrecy.

Among them, Sakitsu Church, rebuilt in 1934, stands out with its striking presence.

The warmth of the people who have preserved their history and faith quietly, yet unmistakably, touches the hearts of all who visit.

●An Island Where Contemporary Art Blends with Nature

Inujima is a small island in the Seto Inland Sea, about four kilometers in circumference. Once known as a quarry that supplied high-quality stone for the stone walls of Edo Castle, Osaka Castle, and Okayama Castle, the island later saw the construction of a copper refinery in 1909, which played a vital role in supporting Japan's modern industry.

Although the refinery has since ceased operations, it has been reborn as an art museum, allowing visitors to reflect on the atmosphere of those earlier times.

Beyond the museum, contemporary artworks are scattered throughout the village, blending with the island's natural scenery to create a distinctive world of their own. As you feel the richness of nature around you, take a moment to reflect on times past and enjoy the quiet flow of history.

●A Japanese Port Town Connected to the World

During the Edo period, Nagasaki served as Japan's sole gateway to the West through Dejima. After the war, it overcame the devastation of the atomic bomb and has continued to communicate its message of peace to the world.

Nagasaki Atomic Bomb Museum and Peace Memorial Park

At the Nagasaki Atomic Bomb Museum, visitors can learn the true extent of the damage caused by the atomic bomb dropped on August 9, 1945, through photographs, artifacts, and survivor testimonies.

It is a place where one can quietly feel the preciousness of life and the wish for nuclear abolition, alongside the tragic realities brought by the bomb.

Dejima

For approximately 220 years, from 1636 to 1859, during Japan's policy of national isolation, Dejima played a crucial role as the sole place for trade and exchange with the West.

Today, the townscape of that era has been faithfully restored, allowing you to experience the origins of international exchange and the daily life of the time by visiting the trading houses, residences, and warehouses.
